I am originally a New Yorker and the number of subways stops and routes there outnumbers us by far. Congestion pricing, reducing car usage by other means, whatever solutions are proposed are impractical until we have better, more accessible muni routes. I shouldn't have to walk 20 to catch a bus to get to the doctor's office, or change busses 2 or 3 times. And Uber and Lyft are a disaster for the city. They clog the streets and are a hazard. They don't know the streets and wind up turning the wrong way on one-way streets, or making turns where not permitted, or ignoring traffic lights. The taxis paid for access to our roads and usually know where they are going. [1] mailto:[REDACTED]
